He became a state officer and at the age of 22, Lyle was selected as the Star Farmer of America, the highest honor the FFA organization can bestow upon a member. Lyle continued to farm in the fertile Puyallup Valley as he focused on the improvement of techniques in the harvesting and processing of his farming operation.

Lyle moved his family and farming operation to Lynden, Washington in 1988 where he knew the climate and available acreage would enable him to continue the successful expansion of his berry operation. During his career in agriculture, Lyle was a leader and innovator. He developed and implemented practices at Rader Farms that have been replicated throughout the entire industry. Although he did not have, the opportunity to go to college, Lyle strongly believed in higher education as a key that can open many doors for today's youth.

Over the past 25 years, Rader Farms has provided summer employment for thousands of young people. Lyle's passion for supporting and employing the younger generation formed a strong bond with the hard working families in the Lynden community. Many have used their earnings to further their education and several have returned as full time employees of the farm.

The goal of the Rader Family is to help support students who have plans to continue their focus in the agricultural industry.
